- 1. In the course of the winter of 1951-1952 large cracks had appeared on recently resurfaced Hungarian concrete roads.
- 2. The Russians took it for granted that the quick deterioration of the roads was caused by voluntary or involuntary negligence in the production of concrete, rather than by the rigors of the winter. Therefore, as of 1 February 1952, two Russian experts had been placed in each of the Hungarian cement factories as supervisors.
